

Ambassador Philip Lader

Philip Lader, the former US Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, is Chairman of WPP plc, the world's largest advertising/marketing services company (including J. Walter Thompson, Ogilvy & Mather, Young & Rubicam, Gray, Hill & Knowlton, and Burson-Marsteller, with 140,000 people in 107 countries).

Ambassador Lader also is a Senior Adviser to Morgan Stanley, Vice Chairman of RAND Corporation, a director of Marathon Oil, AES and Rusal Corporations, and a partner in his home state's largest law firm, Nelson Mullins. He previously served in President Clinton's Cabinet and was White House Deputy Chief of Staff, Assistant to the President, Deputy Director of the Office of Management & Budget, and Administrator of the Small Business Administration and was Executive Vice President of Sir James Goldsmith's holdings (including America's largest private landholdings) and President of Sea Pines Company and universities in Australia and South Carolina. He has served on the boards of Lloyd's of London, the British Museum, St. Paul's Cathedral, the American Red Cross, and several private-equity portfolio companies.

He is an Honorary Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford University, and London Business School and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and serves on the boards of the Smithsonian Institution of American History and the Atlantic Council. Educated at Duke, Michigan, Oxford and Harvard Law School, he has been awarded honorary doctorates by 14 universities and the 2001 Benjamin Franklin Medal by the Royal Society for Arts, Manufactures and Commerce for his contributions to trans-Atlantic relations.